Medical Device Industry Invested $126 Million In SR&ED Spending

Even though you have submitted an SR&ED Tax Credit claim there still may be overlooked items that could amount to a generous return. There are a large number of activities in each development process that you might be unaware qualify for an SR&ED claim.

Examples of Eligible SR&ED activities: (Medical Industry)

- Develop a garment capable of applying intermittent, mild, dry heat to CHF patients in order to decrease cardiac remodeling, morbidity and mortality rate of patients in a simple, practical and cost effective manner.
- Design and test a non-invasive optical sensor to determine potassium concentrations in blood.
- Develop a new technique for stress level identification using saliva samples and to design a portable device (bio-sensor) to identify stress levels in individuals using saliva samples.

If you find your company currently takes part in any of these activities, then why wait to take advantage of the SR&ED tax credit program to receive healthy credit for your innovations?

You are only a few steps away from getting what your company truly deserves for creating, innovating, and developing new products and/or processes.

The Scientific Research and Experimental Development Program:

SR&ED incentives take the form of tax credits, and accelerated or additional tax deductions for expenditures made on research and development. Canadian businesses of all sizes, in all sectors are eligible to receive SR&ED tax credits. The incentives range from 20% of the expenditure, to almost 50% in favorable circumstances.

SR&ED expenditures can include wages, materials, machinery, equipment, overheads, and SR&ED contracts.
